Honorary Degree Also Conferred on George W. Wick-ersham at Commencement.

Special Despatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD. CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 23.—Foremost among the eleven men honored today at Harvard's commencement exercises with degrees in recognition of valuable services in the world was the new president of Harvard's traditional rival, James Rowland Angell of Yale.

The degree of Doctor of Laws, which he received from the hands of A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard, was also bestowed upon another college president, Lemuel Herbert Murlin of Boston University, and upon George Woodward Wickersham, former Attorney-General of the United States.

Dr. Angell's son, James W. Angell, who has been a student at Harvard since 1913, received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Blind Student Gets Degree. William C. Plunkett, whose father is Rear Admiral Charles Plunkett, received a law degree. He is blind and has been a student at Harvard for seven years, having received his college degree three years ago.

Among the over-seers were Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, whose class is holding its fiftieth reunion, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate last fall for Vice-President. In the procession were Bishop William Lawrence, also a graduate of fifty years ago; J. Pierpont Morgan, Mayor Andrew J. Peters of Boston and Mayor Quincy of Cambridge. The addresses, in which honor men of the graduating class had a part, 1,148 regular degrees were awarded. Of these 481 went to graduates in Harvard College, 412 in the University of Arts and Sciences, and 255 in the Graduate School.

Thirty-six women were among the sixty-three students who became masters of education by reason of the degree. The new graduates in education were: Mrs. J. C. Edwards and William H. Edwards, Jr., both of Providence; Robert C. Rand and William Rand, Jr., of New York; N. Y.; John W. Remington, of New York; N. Y.; Donald C. Swadlow of Newark, N. J.

At the annual assembly meeting in the afternoon, at which he presided, Eliot W. Washburn, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, referred to the indebtedness of foreign nations to the United States, saying that there was no plan for dealing with it. He said that the Treasury department was not prepared to take any action on the subject.

Mr. Wickersham said that adequate and effective leadership of the American Republic would and should put this nation in the leadership of the world toward the reduction of armaments.

"On the contrary," he said, "the action of our Government, in its attitude toward the world, has been rather hazy. It has been the creation of force, the creation of big navies and the adoption of a hectoring attitude toward the other nations."

Mr. Wickersham said that the new era of international justice based on accepted principle of right would be hastened by an initiative on the part of the United States. He said that the United States should take the lead in the world.
